

The birds of the Caribbean have adapted in many different ways but their beaks have adapted the most. An example of this is the bananaquit as it has a slender curved bill adapted to taking nectar. Another example is the Parley eyed thrasher which has evolved superior colonizing traits.

BIRDS of the CARIBBEAN

The Flamingo is the national bird of the Bahamas as shown on the stamp below. Also the St Lucia parrot is the national bird of St Lucia which is shown above.
